He Mihi

He Herenga Kura, He Herenga Tāngata ki Hawaiki

Uniting treasure and people to Hawaiki

Tēnā rā kautau katoa, tuatahi huri te tai o whakaaro ki ngā tini mate o tātau kua wheturangitia i whakangaro atu ki te wahi ngaro, haere, e moe.

Tau mai ana te tai o mihi e ū ana ngā kura tāngata ki runga i tēnei herenga waka ki te herenga kura me ona hokinga ki ona whanaketanga, ki ona tuatahitanga ki Hawaiki. I huhuti taku matau ki ngā ika nui o ngā mahi toi, me kokiri ngatahi tātau o Aotearoa, o te moana a Kiwa ki te reo karanga o tātau whanaunga ngā kanaka maoli.

We are honoured to introduce ourselves as the Aotearoa New Zealand delegation co-chairs for FestPAC 2024. “Te kāhui toi o Aotearoa, rarau mai ra, welcome!”

This e-booklet is your compass on the exciting journey ahead of FestPAC 2024. Our dedicated team at Toi Aotearoa, Creative New Zealand, will keep you well-informed as we progress.

Let us share our collective vision as a united delegation, captured in the following kōrero ‘He Herenga Kura, He Herenga Tāngata ki Hawaiki – Uniting treasure and people to Hawaiki.’ This vision serves as our guiding light to unite treasures and people.

This kōrero aims to empower us to carry the stories of Aotearoa arts and heritage to the global heights they deserve.

Taku Hoe

Aotearoa New Zealand Delegation Logo and Theme

The “Taku Hoe” narrative is a powerful symbol of our shared Pacific identity and historical journey. Within this narrative, the terms “kaiurungi” (steerers) and “kaihoe” (paddlers) represent a collective acknowledgment that we are all Pacific people who have traversed the vast expanse of the Pacific over time.

This concept has been carefully crafted and nurtured by our Creative Director for the Aotearoa New Zealand delegation, Tawera Tahuri, drawing inspiration from her mentors like Wayne Ngata and Tā Derek Lardelli. Their teachings, particularly within the context of Horouta, provide cultural depth to the narrative – its deeper meaning represents a nation and all the Pacific communities together.

Horouta, the waka used for the journey to Hawaiki to retrieve the precious kumara (sweet potatoes) and bring them to Aotearoa, is an important symbol of this collective journey. The six karakia used by the tohunga Te Rangitūroua during the return voyage from Hawaiki, bearing the kumara back to Aotearoa, have then become a powerful emblem of solidarity among Pacific nations.

Embedded within this narrative is the concept of “Te Taenga mai o te kumara,” which encapsulates the collaborative effort that brought the kumara and its cultural symbolism to life. The kumara represents pride, talent, and Pacific connections and bridges scientific origins and cultural significance. It illustrates our shared ancestry and the cultural sweetness that binds us.

The imagery of three paddles, inspired by an artifact from the Bishop Museum in Hawai’i, makes the symbol even more significant. As referenced in the karakia, these three sacred paddles are key to navigating specific sea currents and conditions, giving them immense significance in reaching our collective destination.

While each of us bears a personal responsibility, symbolised by our paddling, the spirit of solidarity propels us forward. We work together to regenerate the Pacific, honour our heritage, and celebrate our shared journey.

FestPAC 2024 Theme

Ho’oulu Lāhui, regenerating Oceania to thrive and flourish.

The theme for this 13th Festival is all about voyaging and regeneration. It’s called “Ho’oulu Lāhui,” which means “regenerating Oceania to thrive and flourish.”

This theme is about bringing back the energy and spirit of Pacific culture, and it will involve artists from all over the Pacific.

The programme for the festival is going to be exciting. A waka festival will happen a day ahead of the big opening. The opening and closing ceremonies will include a parade of nations, performances, exhibitions, workshops, and discussions. It’s not just about art, it’s also going to include traditional ceremonies, symposiums, and conferences where people can share ideas and culture.

If you want more details about the festival, you can check out the official FestPAC website:

New Zealand Delegation Overview

From June 06 - 16 2024, Aotearoa New Zealand is set to participate in the 13th Festival of Pacific Arts (FestPAC) in Honolulu, Hawai'i. You are part of a diverse and dynamic New Zealand delegation. The delegation includes artists, performers, and cultural experts who are set to showcase the culture and heritage of Māori and Pacific arts in Aotearoa. With a total of 85 participants, the delegation represents an array of art forms and whakapapa, united by a shared commitment to preserving and celebrating your cultures and communities.

Māori Artists

- Kapa Haka: In partnership with Te Matatini led by Carl Ross, Te Kapa Haka o Te Whānau-ā-Apanui form the foundation of the delegation with 44 performers. They bring with them the power and grace of traditional Māori performing arts.
- Waka Contingent: A ten-person waka contingent led by Master Navigator Hoturoa Barclay-Kerr, carry the ancestral knowledge of waka voyaging. Their presence embodies the seafaring traditions of Māori and Pacific peoples.
- Artistic Experts: Four distinguished experts, Ngahina Hohaia, Rangī Kīpa, Pena Makoare, and Sian Montgomery-Neutze, represent many artistic disciplines. They are dedicated to preserving and revitalising customary practices within Māori heritage.
- Whakairo: Carvers Rakei Kingi, Graham Tipene and Beaumyn Wihongi breathe life into traditional Māori carving and design, reviving ancestral techniques and materials.
- Raranga: Meleta Bennett and Shona Tāwhiao, honour the art of raranga with intricate creations, weaving together the stories of their ancestors.
- Haka Theatre/Dance: Representing Hawaiiiki Tū Productions, Kura Te Ua, Eds Eramiha and Manny Solomon fuse traditional and contemporary elements in their theatre, dance, and performing arts presentations.
- Performance Art/Tāonga Pūoro: Regan Balzer and Horomona Horo use their combined artistic talents to convey cultural narratives and traditional Māori musical sounds, bridging the past and the present.
- Tāonga Pūoro: Libby Gray, a member of the Haumanu Collective, showcases the soothing melodies of traditional Māori musical instruments, resonating with ancestral tunes.
- Uku: Dorothy Waetford brings her clay artworks to life, celebrating the language and cultural narratives of Māori through her sculptures.
- Craft: Neke Moa and Piri Cowie combine traditional and contemporary processes to create stunning taonga and sculptures, reflecting their connections to their cultures.

Pacific Artists

- Literature (Poet/Writer): Daisy Lavea-Timo and Karlo Mila, explore and share the poetic essence of Pacific literature.
- Music: Jeffrey Kalauta, a musical virtuoso, infuses FestPAC with melodies that resonate with the heartbeats of the Pacific.
- Dance/Theatre: Jahra Wasasala, Connor 'Ooshcon' Masseurs and Byrin 'XIII' Mita present a unique collaboration of immersive dance and theatrical expression representing the diverse stories of the Pacific.
- Visual/Multi-Disciplinary Arts: Jack Kirifi, Moses Viliamu, Mathew Peilua, and Pelenakeke Brown showcase their multi-disciplinary talents, enriching the visual arts landscape with Pacific narratives.

Youth Ambassadors

- Māori: Poroaki McDonald, an accomplished performer in theatre and dance, carries the cultural legacy of Māori to inspire the youth.
- Pacific: Annafinau Tukuitoga is a youth ambassador, bridging cultures and promoting Pacific heritage among the younger generation.

TE KAPA HAKA O TE WHĀNAU-A-APANUI (FULL 44)

Te Kapa Haka o Te Whānau-a-Apanui, the reigning Te Matatini champions, was formed in 1986 by tribal leaders out of a need to support tribal development within the wider confederation of Mataatua. As the group bears the name of the tribe, the compositions re-tell the histories of tribal heroes and events, and strives to maintain a unique tribal flare and style of performance.

The team's catch-cry 'Apanui e tū', calls for all members, not only the kapa, but the whole tribe, to stand with pride and prestige.

ARTISTIC COLLABORATING EXPERTS

NGAHINA HOHAIA

(Te Āti Awa, Ngāti Ruanui, Ngāti Moeahu, Ngāti Haupoto)

Ngahina is a versatile artist with a deep commitment to preserving and revitalising customary practices within her Māori heritage. Her expertise spans various art forms, and she has a rich history of exhibiting her multidisciplinary works in New Zealand and internationally.

While tā moko remains an essential element of her artistic repertoire, her major He Ara Uru Ora installation will be one of the highlight exhibitions in Hawai'i. This installation showcases her creative prowess and contributes to the collective effort to uphold Māori rights in expressing cultural identity through art forms that honour tohora/parāoa.

At FestPAC, Ngahina will collaborate with Rangī Kipa, Sian Montgomery-Neutze, and Bernard Makaore.

ARTISTIC COLLABORATING EXPERTS

RANGI KIPA

(Te Ātiawa, Taranaki, Ngāti Tama ki te Taihu)

Rangi trained in traditional carving styles and has been instrumental in reviving ancestral techniques that had not been well practised. He has pushed the boundaries of materials with carvings in resins and has worked on every scale from personal ornament to waharoa.

At FestPAC he'll share his work with rei/parāoa, which supports the revitalisation of customary artistic practice.

This focus is part of his collaboration with Ngahina Hohaia, Bernard Makaore and Sian Montgomery-Neutze to uphold Māori rights to express cultural identity through artforms that use tohora/parāoa.

Moses Viliamu is a Tokelauan (Atafu) and Samoan (Faleula) visual artist, born and raised in Canon's Creek, Porirua, in Wellington. Moses' favourite mediums include printing, painting, graphic design and visual projection and his work is a balance of aesthetic and intuitive movement – evident of his love to create abstract textures and overlaying paint to create depth. His art is about the journey of people – the bold colours, the layers, the flow, the textures, the creativity – all amassed to represent that of the resilient human spirit. In 2020, Moses and Jack Kirifi created a large mural based on 350 Pacific and traditional Tokelauan tattoo designs.

MATTHEW (MATTY) LEPAIO

(Tokelau Samoan)

Mattys Samoan/Tokelau heritage, art, and fashion has provided opportunities to investigate intergenerational perspectives of well-being through the revival of traditional artwork.

“It’s an even better time to be Pacific, compared to my parent’s time where they were assimilated into society and not allowed to be themselves, Today we can be ourselves, celebrate our culture and art, indigenous ways of being are acknowledged, a revival has begun”.

PELENAKEKE BROWN

(Samoa)

Pelenakeke Brown is an interdisciplinary artist, curator and writer. Her practice explores the intersections of disability cultural concepts and Samoan cultural concepts. Her work investigates sites of knowledge, and she uses technology, writing, poetry, and performance to explore these ideas. Pelenakeke has presented her work internationally, been the recipient of many local and international fellowships and residencies, and she is a current artist in residence at BricLAB Contemporary Arts in Brooklyn, NYC. In 2019 Pelenakeke was awarded the Disability Dance Artistry Award by Dance/NYC, and she was the 2020 recipient of the Pacific Toa Award at Creative New Zealand's Arts Pasifika Awards.

YOUTH AMBASSADOR

ANNAFINAU TUKUITOGA

(Niue)

Annafinau is a 19-year old New Zealand-born Niuean musical artist from Paeroa, Waikato, specialising in playing the Banjo, infusing her passion for country music and bluegrass with traditional Niuean songs - specifically chants. Anna was taught old chants from Niue and old songs by her grandmother. Anna has been the New Zealand Country Music Youth Ambassador and was also the youth MP representative for Scott Simpson in the Coromandel region. In 2019, Anna travelled to Chengdu, China with TOPA (Talents Of The Pacific Academy) for the Youth Sister International Music Festival - where she had the opportunity to yodel, showcase her banjo skills and sing with other young people. In 2022, Annafinau received the Creative New Zealand Arts, Culture and Creativity Award at Prime Minister's Pacific Youth Awards.

Why FestPAC matters to Aotearoa, New Zealand

The upcoming Festival of Pacific Arts and Culture (FestPAC) offers an exceptional opportunity to elevate important issues within the Pacific and indigenous communities. The history of New Zealand's participation in FestPAC and its unique position in the event make it extra special.

Here's why FestPAC 2024 is important

Aotearoa, New Zealand's involvement spans five decades, showing our enduring commitment to preserving and celebrating Pacific and indigenous cultures. Hosting the festival in 1976 was a testament to our dedication to showcase our heritage.

FestPAC is arguably the largest global gathering of Pasifika artists and cultural practitioners from 28 Pacific nations and territories.

Our artists have the opportunity to shine on an international stage, sharing their talents, stories, and traditions.

The artists selected for our delegation are not just participants but ambassadors for Aotearoa, embodying our nation's cultural diversity, creativity and heritage. They're like storytellers of our country.

Strategic Objectives for FestPAC 2024

The New Zealand delegation is determined to achieve important goals at FestPAC 2024. Our participation is not just about showing culture; it's about making positive changes at home and abroad. Here are our main objectives:

Advance CITES

We are dedicated to engaging in activities that protect endangered species, advocating for stronger regulations, promoting sustainable trade, and educating the Pacific. We want to participate in the conversations around safeguarding animals and plants at risk.

Safeguarding Endangered Artforms

We are passionate about preserving and safeguarding endangered art forms and traditional practices of Māori and Pasifika communities. FestPAC is a big stage to show off these important traditions.

Career Advancement

We strive to provide our artists with professional growth opportunities. FestPAC is a place to make new connections, learn new things, and boost career opportunities.

Partnership and Whanaungatanga

Our engagement extends to building strong connections with other Pacific and indigenous communities at FestPAC. We're not just here for us, we want to connect with other Pacific and indigenous groups at FestPAC to bring us all closer.

Addressing Climate Change

The arts hold the potential to inspire change and raise awareness. We are committed to using the arts to discuss environmental challenges and solutions, playing our part in addressing climate change.

Amplifying Youth Voices

We want young voices to be heard, and FestPAC provides a platform for young people to share their perspectives, collaborate across generations, and shape the future of Pacific arts and culture.
